

Consular and Trade Offices

Governments from throughout the world have consular offices and trade representation in greater Atlanta, Macon, Augusta, and Savannah. Consular offices are established by foreign governments 1) to officially develop economic, commercial, scientific and cultural relations between the country they represent and the area in which they serve, and 2) to safeguard the interests of the sending country and its citizens traveling or residing in their consular district. Traditionally these duties include issuing and renewing passports and other official documents, helping travelers in distress, signing death certificates, legalizing or delivering official documents, and assisting travelers in trouble with local law enforcement or immigration authorities. Many consular offices often support cultural affairs and/or trade and investment, as well.

Seventy-one countries are represented in Georgia, with twenty-six career consulates, forty-seven honorary consular offices and more than one dozen dedicated trade and investment agencies. Career officials are members of their country's foreign (diplomatic) or commercial service, while honorary officials are local residents appointed by foreign governments to perform consular duties. The Dean of the Consular Corps, currently Mr. Shane Stephens, Consul General of Ireland, is traditionally the career official with the longest tenure.

Atlanta is also home to foreign government representatives such as the Taipei Economic and Cultural Office and the Québec Government Office. Additionally, more than a dozen foreign governments have independent operations in Atlanta with a mission to promote trade and/or investment between their countries or regions and Georgia and the Southeast U.S. In total, there are eighty-six different consular and trade offices in Atlanta.
